

Faena Theater Presents its New Show

Fénix, from timeless ashes emerge new beginnings.

After the cast of Sensatia takes its final bow this month, Faena Theater will transform into a mind-bending phoenix's nest to host a spectacular new show, Fénix. The multisensory production, directed by Quixotic's Anthony Magliano and Christian Squires, details the phoenix-like rise of Artemis, a being formed of stardust fighting against the dark energy that surrounds her. Transcending her own dimension, the show's lead protagonist, played by the talented Bianca Allanic, undergoes a startling metamorphosis right before the audience's eyes. Narrated by a poetic sage and combining jaw-dropping illusions, stunning projections, live music, and decadent dinner fare, guests will have their senses heightened throughout the intoxicating performance. The outstanding ensemble includes local songstress and "America's Got Talent" semi-finalist Yoli Mayor, violinist Shane Borth, cellist Ben Muñoz, and aerialists Megan Stockman and Samantha Mixan, who perform together to create an alternate reality in which guests are called to leave their old selves behind in search of the ever new.

Fénix will debut in October 2018. To stay up-to-date on all Faena news, follow us on Instagram (@Faena) and subscribe to our e-newsletter at www.faena.com/miami-beach.

Summer Jazz Series

Settle into your plush banquet and prepare for an enchanting evening with award-winning jazz vocalist Jazzmeia Horn as she brings her stunning gifts to the stage of Faena Theater on September 26.

Winner of the prestigious Thelonious Monk Competition and GRAMMY nominated for her debut album, "A Social Call", the 27-year-old Dallas-born singer – who has been compared to both Billie Holiday and Sarah Vaughan by jazz legend Jon Hendricks – leaves her audiences rapt and eager to hear more of her soulful serenades with every performance.

Celebrated worldwide as "the future of jazz," Jazzmeia Horn has dazzled concert-goers across impressive venues like Lenox Lounge, the Apollo Theater and Birdland. At Faena Theater, guests will marvel at her timeless sound as she performs the standards, spirituals, bop, and R&B songs from her debut album with Prestige Records. Combining breathtaking range, natural scat singing ability, storytelling prowess, and crystal-clear voice, Horn's performance is not to be missed.

Naama Tsabar at Faena Art Center Buenos Aires

Faena Art presents “Melodies of Certain Damage (Opus 2)”, a new sonic and immersive, site-specific exhibition by Israeli artist Naama Tsabar.

Israeli artist Naama Tsabar has spent her prolific career exploring the connections among conceptual art, performance, and music with interactive sonic installations that have been exhibited at the Guggenheim in New York, Pianissimo Gallery in Milan and Tel Aviv's Dvir Gallery. This month, she'll debut Melodies of Certain Damage (Opus 2) at Faena Art Center Buenos Aires during Art Basel Cities.

Like many of her previous artworks that explore questions of power, eroticism, gender and memory, this site-specific sonic environment will tune the entire Sala Molinos exhibition space, activated by a number of female identifying and gender nonconforming musicians and performers. “There is a certain kind of community-related collaboration and participation within my work, and I find that with women it is easier to achieve things without anybody overpowering someone else,” the artist told Whitewall Magazine. “There is a lot of listening and a lot of patience, and that's really important to creation.”

Appropriating an iconic and overtly macho trope of breaking the guitar during a punk or rock and roll performance, Tsabar repurposes the broken pieces as objects of beauty, instruments in their own right, and the act of playing these relics of virility creates a new kind of quiet power. In doing so, the installation appropriates and subverts the aggressive gestures of rock and roll and their associations with masculinity, while at the same time encouraging a new mode for public engagement with sculpture and sound.

“We are honored to host Naama Tsabar in Buenos Aires and to co-commission her latest body of work and new site-specific performance, which breaks with traditional divides between popular music and contemporary art,” said Alan Faena. “Her sonic environment proposes a new exhibition and concert format that disrupts our experience of the Faena Art Center and exemplifies our commitment to supporting artists as they work across disciplines and geographic boundaries.”

AN ARTISTIC JOURNEY

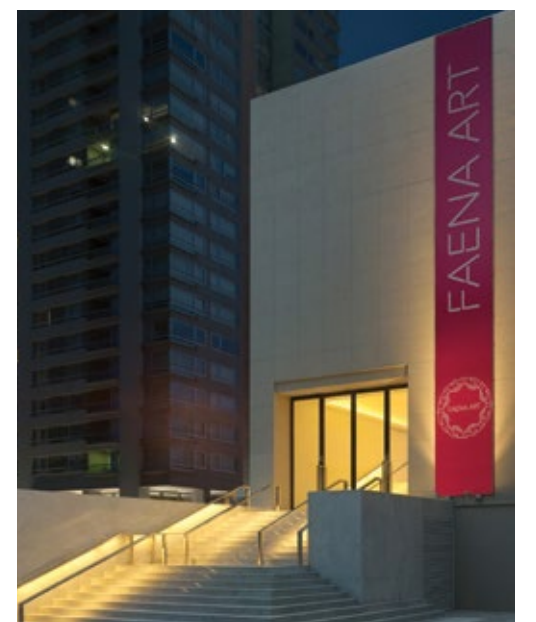

Immerse yourself in the inaugural Art Basel Cities Week at Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires is poised to take the art world by storm this month. The Argentine arts capital, chosen over a notable group of world capitals, will be the first-ever host city for the new multi-year Art Basel Cities program. Buenos Aires will take its place on a global stage September 6-12 as celebrated local and international artists enliven the city through a series of experiential installations, performances, site-specific sculptures and special events.

The high-profile art week will spread across three of the city's emerging neighborhoods—La Boca, Puerto Madero and Palermo—as part of the Cecilia Alemani-curated series, dubbed “Hopscotch,” a moniker derived from Argentine writer Julio Cortázar's 1963 stream-of-consciousness novel of the same name.

The program features never-before-seen venues, forgotten landmarks, and public sites in grand plazas, parks, and along the waterfront that are not typically devoted to contemporary art. Included in the showcase, among others, are an oversized sculpture from Buenos Aires-based Luciana Lamothe; Italian artist Maurizio Cattelan's living cemetery, Eternity; and American artist David Horvitz's tribute to Marcel Duchamp. Championing artistic innovation and turning the city itself into a living canvas, this unique and multifaceted program is sure to cement Buenos Aires' ever-growing global reputation as a must-visit cultural destination.

A New You

This month, Tierra Santa Healing House is offering a variety of workshops to relax and rejuvenate the body.

Guests can join Eric Lopez on September 13 for a Shamanic Family Constellations workshop to uncover generations of familial trauma by identifying intergenerational psychic burdens and casting them aside. By the end of the workshop, participants can enjoy a more peaceful path forward, filled with awareness and ease.

On September 24, Michelle Berlin and co-leader Gina Moon will guide a complimentary full moon and sound bowl meditation under the stars. Meditators will directly benefit from Berlin's breadth of experience rooted in her studies at the Iyengar Himalayan Center in Dharamsala, India.

Then, at the end of the month, Spa Director Agustina Caminos will host a two-day Basic Pranic Healing Course on September 29-30 based on the teachings of Master Choa Kok Sui, proven to help align the body's prana, or energy, to bolster an improved state of health, happiness and healing.

CUTTING EDGES

If the sun and heat of summer has left your mane dry and limp, head to Faena's Rossano Ferretti Salon to nourish your locks back to life.

Famous for "The Method," which focuses on the natural fall of the hair, Rossano Ferretti stylists enhance individual beauty by tailoring "invisible cuts," treatments, balayage, color gloss, and extensions to each client's specific hair type and characteristics. To revive dull and damaged hair, indulge in a Prodigio treatment rich in hydrolyzed keratin that leaves the hair shiny and silky by deeply penetrating the hair shaft and restoring hair cuticles. For color-treated hair, opt for a Dolce treatment: the no-rinse, detangling spray is rich in hydrolyzed proteins that help prolong hair color while minimizing breakage and frizz, and adding strength and sheen. To restore a healthy shine, try Brillante, an intensely hydrating, no-rinse shining oil with a UV filter to protect hair from sun exposure, leaving your tresses soft, shiny and strong.

In-house guests may dial Rossano Ferretti at 4385. For more information and reservations, call +1 786 655 5570.

RADIANT ALL SEASON

BY DR. ROBERTA DEL CAMPO
TIERRA SANTA HEALING HOUSE
WELLNESS COLLABORATOR

In addition to making a big impact on your waistline, the type of nutrients you digest also play a factor in your skin health. When you lack certain supplements and vitamins, your body and face will show it.

Acne

Vitamin A should be your new go-to supplement since it has been known to get rid of acne. However, it is important to tread carefully since too much of a good thing can result in dizziness, nausea and headaches. I suggest starting with your diet by adding in vitamin A-rich foods, including carrots, red meat and eggs. Further, zinc can be another powerful player in clearing out your pores. Zinc is an important part of wound healing and often acne lesions are inflamed.

Sun Damage and Free Radicals

Turn toward the powerful antioxidants of vitamins C and E. Antioxidants fight free radical damage, which is caused by environmental pollution and ultraviolet rays. Although taking vitamin C every day via pill or chewable isn't a bad idea for your body, a topical vitamin C and E combo might be more effective because these two work best when they're together.

Dryness

While the condition of your skin and its softness will vary by season, low Vitamin D can lead to persistent dryness. Vitamin D likely improves dryness by improving the skin barrier function. Another option is to eat more of foods rich in this mineral like fatty fish, milk and cheese.

Brittle Hair and Nails

Low levels of iron or biotin can result in brittle hair or nails, especially in women. I recommend an iron or biotin supplement to combat this deficiency. Further, low iron levels have been associated with hair loss and hair thinning, again particularly in women. I recommend checking your ferritin levels and supplementing with iron if levels are too low.

To book a consultation with Dr. Del Campo, please email spamiami@faena.com or call 786 655 5570. In-house guests may dial Tierra Santa at 3217 for more information.

Tango Your Way Into a Miami Holiday

This year, skip the holiday entertaining at home and leave the planning to us.

Our Faena For Families package makes traveling with your whole family a breeze, thanks to steep discounts on second rooms, complimentary breakfast, and plenty to entertain the little ones with our Faena Play package. Break bread with friends and family over delicious holiday meals at Pao by Paul Qui or Francis Mallmann's Los Fuegos, and dance the night away in The Living Room with live musical acts. After hours, head to Saxony Bar where our talented mixologists design creative cocktails you won't find anywhere else. For those ringing in the New Year at Faena, there's an exciting celebration in store. Tango your way into 2019 as the hotel welcomes guests into the gilded Cathedral lobby with live performances from professional tango dancers and a tanguero musician bellowing his bandoneón. Sip champagne under a sea of hanging roses in our award-winning restaurants before heading poolside to dance in the moonlight to a live band and headlining DJs. As fireworks light up the sky, and drinks continue to flow, guests can toast a memorable start to the coming year.

It's a time for new beginnings, fresh opportunities and footloose fun. Decorated in beautiful peach blossom branches, The Library Lounge at Faena Hotel Buenos Aires is kicking off springtime with a Cherry Blossom fête to celebrate the change of season. Old friends and new can enjoy the longer daylight hours dipping their toes in the pool and sipping on a menu of specialty cocktails designed for the evening. Bartenders will mix sweet Freya cocktails with Absolut mango vodka, Amaretto liqueur, a splash of orange juice, and crushed sugar and lime, as well as citrusy Kratos libations shaken with Absolut Pear, Malbec syrup, lemon juice and Angostura bitters. Back inside, order a Perfect Sweet Martini or The Walker before letting loose to a rollicking live band like Still Rock or Inclanfunk, who is sure to get the dance party started. The evening marches on with bottles of Dom Perignon and Veuve Clicquot accompanied by live sets from all-star DJs. After a long and cold winter, Faena's signature spring party will bring the long-awaited heat back to Buenos Aires.

Architecture and music; an affair that acts on the matter

The art of sensitizing the art-space finds a majestic vehicle in the combination of music and architecture.

"A composition is like a house you can walk around in". —John Cage

Perhaps music, more than the art of sound, is the art of time. That's why its communion with space, and architecture, is so often so perfect. When we touch upon this relationship between music and architecture, we're really speaking not of the meeting of two arts, but of two dimensions—and of their respective original forces.

The influence of music on space is palpable. We know that a room, and what happens inside it, can be transformed radically by the musical influences applied to it. But this also happens, as David Byrne has noted, in the other direction: spaces, and their purposes, have inspired and influenced schools of musical thought. Sacred music could hardly have existed without the prior existence of cathedrals and monasteries. Punk simply wouldn't sound the same without the chaotic, little London clubs of its era.

Music which Acts on the Subject
Numerous studies have analyzed the effects of music at the cellular level: on behavior, longevity and other aspects of cells. Music has also been documented for its role in the process of neuroplasticity, and in the physical changes undergone by the brain over the course of our lifetimes. Thus, even without appealing to any 'new-age' hypotheses warning of the impact of music on the molecular structures of water, we might suggest with some confidence that music has a tangible impact on matter.

But if music has this capacity to alter cellular behavior, or to re-model the human brain, let's speculate a little on what affect music might have on space—and the depths it can reach.

The Art of Time-Space
"I call architecture frozen music". —Goethe

The German composer, K.H. Stockhausen warned that the space-music relationship is an essential factor in his compositions. During the composition phase, he considered the direction at which sound would travel through space. He found it impossible to dissociate music from physical space, something similar to what happened with Iannis Xenakis, a French-Greek architect who later shined as a musician during the second half of the 20th-century.

Spatiality in music, and musicality in architecture, refer to the mathematical essences of both disciplines. The "music of the spheres," as Pythagoras called it: the music generated, at least philosophically, by the displacement of the stars.

It's interesting to consider that sound needs space to come to life—that is, as a means to the unleashing of its waves. On the other hand, there's no space, at least not on Earth, that can be fully shielded from the assault of sound. We might then even insist upon following Stockhausen's example and simply admit that one cannot be separate from the other.

In the middle of a crossroad
Music and architecture meet at a crossroads which, similar to a Zen koan, or the tree which falls in a forest, is perhaps in need of that perceptive ingredient to even exist. That is, they need time, space, and a consciousness which perceives them. So, the next time you listen to music, and you'll do so inevitably within a physical space, remember that you're an equal protagonist in one of the deepest of communions.
